Overview

Section B of Mega Structure 2.3 is a bifurcated construction.

Section B's knorthernly (Sub-Section A) and eesterly (Sub-Section B) sections are constructed in the same architectural style of the Barbarous Bio-mechanist Movement of the Perambulator Culture during the First Expansionist Period[1].

The knorthoeustern section (Sub-Section C), or the portions hitherto mapped, bears a passing resemblance to the Tomb of Krathyguiar'lkjjin Mirethought[2].

Entities and Threats

From prior video recordings[3] and expedition member testimony, Section B of Mega Structure 2.3 possesses roving dangers and threats that exist within Mega Structure 2.3.

Whether these entities are native or nonnative to Mega Structure 2.3 is not available given the direct threat posed when encountering them.

Without belaboring the point, deliberate and judicious applications of violence and/or evasive tactics should be employed if/when encountering any entity.

Rather than engaging in cumbersome taxonomic hierarchy classification, given the supranatural qualia of the entities, naming conventions will use the natural language sourced from past expedition member descriptions.

The encountered entities that exist[4] within Section B of Mega Structure 2.3 are as follows.

1. Steaming Attraction
2. Crystalline Bolt

[4] The aforementioned list only includes entities that have been encountered. That is not to say that more rarefied entities do not exist within Section B of Mega Structure 2.3

3. Flesh Wall
4. Faceless Dead
5. Stinking Dead
6. Formaldehyde-Scented Fire Wall
7. Swelling Head and Bloodless Warts
8. Many Faces Molds Metal

Anomalous Olfactory Phenomena

At various points, expedition members of the Antediluvian Antiquities Commission's geological mapping missions recorded that Section B of Mega Structure 2.3 emitted the following catalogued smells.

1. Rotting meat
2. Stagnant water
3. Secondhand and old books
4. Seaweed with lachrymatorous qualities
5. Freshly cut grass
6. Formaldehyde
7. Copper
8. Petrichor

Anomalous Auditory Phenomena

Like the repetition of specific smells, certain sounds were repeatedly heard throughout Section B of Mega Structure 2.3.

Recordings of these sounds were damaged beyond intelligibility.

Descriptions of smells are catalogued below for posterity; sourced from interview transcripts and primary source documents of geological expedition members.

1. Clanging
2. Rattling
3. Scratching
4. Keening

5. Roaring
6. Swooshing
7. Humming
8. Crooning
